

ABSTRACT

A reclosable carton is provided which has a reclosable top with a pair of top end flaps and a top reclosable flap to which a foldable tuck flap is attached. The carton has a top tear flap which has a zipper strip for opening the carton to gain access to the contents. This top tear flap is foldably attached to a side panel which has a locking slit between the flap and an adjoining side panel into which the tuck flap is inserted and locked as the carton is reclosed after having been opened. The tuck flap may have a pair of shoulders along the fold line between the tuck flap and the reclosable flap which interlock with shoulders formed along the slit between the side panel and the top tear flap.